Criteria and weighting	Level	Comments:
Knowledge and understanding of the topic/ issues under consideration (25%)	Very Good	Generally, a very good generic overview of your topic, which follows the overall suggested structure from the summative information. Don't introduce lots of new questions into the discussion when you are completing a summative, focus on answering the main question posed by the summative itself.
Use of relevant sources (10%)	Very Good	Very good relevant use of resources to support the discussion. If you intend to take this subject forward to the dissertation module for example, continue to develop your research and content so that it is truly cross sectional
Criticality (25%)	Very Good	Whilst some of your content is a little informal regarding syntax, in some areas of the presentation, the use of a real world/scenario discussion to develop the topic under consideration does give the content some authenticity in the context of this being a real world problem. Developing your research further will give you that opportunity to further develop debate and discussion in your context.
Structure and Presentation (10%)	Very Good	The presentation is completed to a very good standard, with relevant supporting imagery and text. There has been a genuine attempt to develop a professional presentation using a relevant topic.
Presentation and Communication Skills (30%)	Very Good	Keep your language a little more formal, and academic. At the moment some of the context is a little conversational. As the presentation develops the context does become more formal and so do take this approach moving forward. A very good outcome here.
Overall
Positives:
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Overall, a very good outcome • With a very good professional structure to the presentation • And a relevant current topic reflected in the context of the summative
Points for development:
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Apply deeper research to your context should you chose to move this topic forward for your dissertation

- Use formal language all the way through the content
- Focus on answering the summative question and don't introduce more questions to the context
